Team Work

Both teams worked in groups, the Patrol leaders were so excited as their facilitator carried them through the theory and practicals since the scouts are taught to learn by doing.

Practical Skills

During the training the Patrol leaders were able to learn the practicality of food for life by making their own Garden, by plowing the land applying manure, planting the seeds, covering the ground, watering and fencing the garden.

The Patrol leaders were able to combine the knowledge studied at school and from the program to go as far as educating each other further on the best ways the program can be localized to fit the conditions back home.

The Scout Leaders on the other hand debated aggressively on the ways of addressing the challenges to come in order to realize a success in the program putting in mind the challenges they faced in a similar program done before.
